

I understand that the Consumer Bankers Association has challenged Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law. This is unfortunate. I would like it to be noted that I support the Telephone Privacy Law in Indiana. Before I was able to get on the "no call" list harassing telemarketing calls were a normal part of our evening meal as a family. Indeed they were part of our daily life. I did not approve and constantly requested that we be removed from the call lists but the calls continued. The banks I choose to deal with, some of them member of the Consumer Bankers Association, have the right to call me in regards to my accounts; however, I get enough unsolicited mail from them and do not wish them to be able to call me on the phone as well. In today's society we are continually bombarded with television commercials and Internet advertising. If I want any of the services that any of the members of the Consumer Bankers Association offer, I know where to find them and how to get in touch with them without them intruding into my private life with telemarketers.
